HIV is a virus that causes AIDS.

AIDS was first identified in Malawi in 1985.

HIV stands for Human Immunodeficiency Virus.

The virus is named like that because it is found in humans.

AIDS stands for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome.

Acquired refers to the fact that one gets the virus from someone else.

Immune refers to the body's defence system which fights diseases or infections.

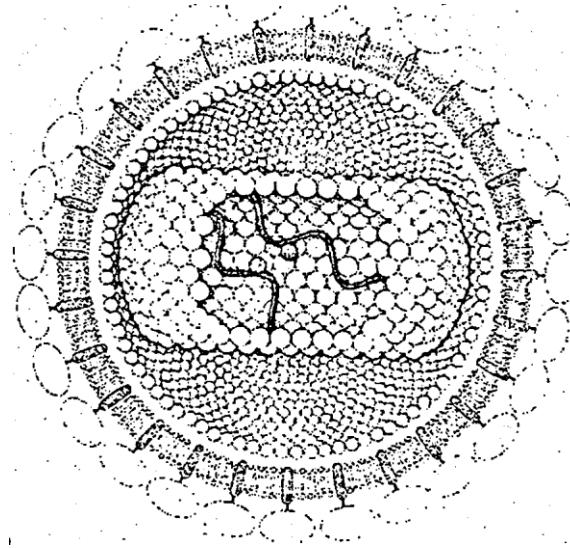

Deficiency indicates a weakness in the system.

Syndrome means collection of signs and symptoms of illnesses.

AIDS is a term used to indicate the most serious stage of HIV infection.

This is when one's immunity becomes so low that one is susceptible to various kinds of opportunistic infections.

TRANSMISSION OF HIV

- sexual intercourse
- infected blood and organs
- mother-to-child transmission (MTCT) or parent-to-child transmission (PTCT)

PREVENTION OF HIV TRANSMISSION

- receiving screened blood
- abstaining from sexual intercourse
- being faithful to one uninfected partner
- correct and consistent use of condoms

RISKY BEHAVIOURS THAT CAN LEAD TO THE SPREAD OF HIV

- having multiple sexual partners
- having unprotected sexual intercourse
- having STIs
- using unsterilised skin piercing instruments
- receiving infected blood
- abusing drug and alcohol
- assuming that their partner is HIV negative by appearance

VULNERABLE GROUPS TO HIV INFECTION

- mobile persons
- prostitutes
- street children and orphans
- poor or unemployed people
- adolescents
- communities which practice traditions which promote HIV transmission

The vulnerable groups are groups of people which are likely to be exposed to HIV infections due to their behaviour

MOTHER-TO-CHILD TRANSMISSION (MTCT) OR PARENT-TO-CHILD TRANSMISSION (PTCT)

HIV can be transmitted to a baby during pregnancy, delivery and breastfeeding.

The risk of transmitting the virus to the baby is greater if:

- ✓ the mother acquired infection during pregnancy
- ✓ the mother is in advanced stage of AIDS
- ✓ when the baby is in contact with infected blood during delivery
- ✓ the delivery is premature
- ✓ the baby is breastfed more than six months
- ✓ breastfeeding is mixed with other liquids or solids

PREVENTION OF MOTHER-TO-CHILD TRANSMISSION

- preventing babies from getting HIV from their infected mothers
- preventing women and girls of reproductive age from becoming infected with HIV
- preventing pregnancies among HIV positive women
- preventing HIV transmission during pregnancy, delivery and breastfeeding
- placing HIV positive pregnant women on anti-retroviral drugs and the drug being given to the new born babies
- using caesarean operation
- giving mothers information on feeding

THE IMPORTANCE OF PREVENTING MOTHER-TO-CHILD TRANSMISSION (PMTCT) AS A FIGHT AGAINST HIV AND AIDS

It is important to prevent mother-to-child transmission so that babies are born HIV free.

THE ROLE OF THE COMMUNITY IN THE PREVENTION OF MOTHER-TO-CHILD TRANSMISSION

- encouraging HIV positive pregnant women to go for guidance and counselling
- encouraging HIV positive pregnant women to take ARVs and not to breastfeed
- avoiding discriminating against people living with HIV and AIDS
- providing care and support to women, children and families infected and affected by HIV and AIDS
- encouraging both parents to go for HIV testing and counselling (HTC)
- conducting awareness campaigns on prevention of HIV and AIDS

UNIT 2 GENDER AND HIV AND AIDS

HOW STEREOTYPED EXPECTATIONS SHAPE THE LIVES OF WOMEN AND GIRLS IN TERMS OF HIV AND AIDS

Women are often described as being weak in body and mind, emotionally dependent, passive, uncompetitive, and that they lack confidence in themselves.

It is therefore said that they are not fit to assume leadership positions.

Because of the emphasis on the biological roles of women, they are supposed to be attractive, reproductive, pleasant as compared to men, who claim to be tough and competitive.

These stereotyped expectations that shape the lives of women, may be a justification in the minds of some men.

Such people take advantage of those expectations to harass, abuse and rape women.

This may be one of the reasons why many women contract HIV.

WOMEN AND GIRLS EMPOWERMENT ON HIV AND AIDS ISSUES

Education empowers boys and girls, men and women to become aware of their rights and make decisions that improve their lives, families and communities.

It is an agent that can change the practices that might hinder social-cultural and economic development.

It also improves the health status of women and their families and it is also a vaccine to HIV.

Through education, women and girls can be empowered on HIV and AIDS issues.

FACTORS THAT MAKE WOMEN AND GIRLS MORE VULNERABLE TO HIV INFECTION

- ❖ women are culturally not empowered to negotiate for safer sexual intercourse with men
- ❖ since women are perceived to be weak and passive they may be raped by men who claim to be tough
- ❖ since one of the women's roles in the household is said to be attending to the sick, they can easily contract HIV if they are not careful
- ❖ culturally women have low economic status, as a result, they may always depend upon men to provide them with resources in exchange for sex

WAYS OF DEALING WITH HIV AND AIDS IN RELATION TO GENDER

- educating both men and women on the negative effects of gender biases, inequality and imbalance
- educating both men and women on the importance of respecting human rights and dignity
- educating both men and women on the need to be assertive so that they can stand up for themselves without being aggressive

UNIT 3 SEXUALITY

FACTORS THAT INFLUENCE SEXUALITY

- parents
- religion
- migration
- environment

PHYSICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL CHANGES DURING ADOLESCENCE

As boys and girls are growing up, they experience changes in their bodies.

These changes influence them emotionally and may cause anxiety.

The changes are influenced by the production of sex hormones.

The sex hormones are known as testosterone in boys and oestrogen in girls.

PHYSICAL AND PSYCHOLOGICAL CHANGES IN BOYS

In Malawi, men and women tend to perform different gender roles.

These roles have an effect on the type of entrepreneurship activities that men and women engage in.

For example, women tend to engage in small scale businesses while men tend to engage in large scale businesses

Because of this gender role difference, women tend to be given less money from lending institutions unlike men who are given large amounts of money.

However, both men and women need to do business activities without any discrimination.

UNIT 15 ANTI-RETROVIRALS (ARVs)

Meaning of anti-retrovirals (ARVs)

Anti-retrovirals are drugs that work by stopping the replication of the virus that causes AIDS.

These drugs reduce the amount of virus in the blood because they make the virus inactive.

Therefore, it does not multiply.

This slows down the damage to one's immune system.

HOW ARVs WORK

ARVs work by preventing HIV from making copies of or multiplying itself.

People living with HIV take different types of ARVs that work in different ways depending on what their doctors think will help them the most.

All ARVs interfere with key steps in the viral life cycle and stop the virus from reproducing.

If HIV cannot reproduce, the amount of HIV in a person's body goes down.

The immune system then has a chance to become stronger again.

If one's immune system is functioning properly, his or her body is less likely to become sick.

It is important to follow the doctor's instructions when one is on ARV treatment.

SIDE EFFECTS OF ARVs

- diarrhoea
- tiredness
- prolonged headaches
- loss of appetite
- vomiting

ROLE OF FOOD DURING ARV TREATMENT

These orphans are found in villages, streets, towns and cities.

Vulnerable children are children who are weak, not well protected, easily attacked and have nobody to take care of them.

They lack basic needs such as food, clothes and shelter.
